A SERMON ON MEMORIAL DAY:

Preached in St. John's Reformed Church Sunday Morning

BY REV. A. SCHMIDT

Large Attendance of Grand Army Men—Spacious Auditorium Filled With People.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE DISCOURSE

The members of Gregg Post No. 95 Grand Army of the Republic attended Memorial services Sunday morning, in St. John's Reformed church. The decorations were quite elaborate. The pulpit was handsomely adorned with the National colors and with palms and cut flowers. A mound of flowers was arranged displaying the National colors. The large auditorium was filled with interested and attentive listeners.

The musical part of the program was very fine. An anthem entitled "As pants the hart for cooling streams" was sung, the solo part being taken by Miss Louise Harper. A quartette rendered a very beautiful selection entitled "Consider and Hear Me" the solo part being taken by Mrs. Schmidt.

The pastor Rev. Ambrose Schmidt preached an eloquent sermon a synopsis of which follows:

Text 2 Timothy 2:3-4. "Take thy part in suffering hardship as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, no soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life; that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier.

The words of counsel contained in the text were written by a man who was conversant with military tactics and thoroughly familiar with the terms of warfare. It is St. Paul the brave soldier of Jesus Christ writing to his spiritual son Timothy. He recognizes that the battles which the Christian must fight are as real and exacting as any that the soldier encounters on the battle fields of the world. The true patriot is the man who at all times carries deep in his heart a glowing fire that has been kindled at his nation's altar-fires. A fire that can never be quenched. This is the fire that makes the hearts of men beat and throb with a devotion and a love unlike every other love. This was the spirit that animated the hearts of thousands of our nation's sons, when 43 years ago, the first threatening blow was struck. This is the spirit that marks each heroe's grave with the stars and stripes and heaps fragrant flowers over each silent mound on Memorial Day. Today—tomorrow, this nation will do homage to her heroic sons and in this service does honor to herself. Memorial Day marks a great epoch in the history of these United States, next to the day that tells of our nation's birth, stands the day that tells of the saving of that nation's life. Tomorrow, hands that were once joined in battles as foes, will be joined in bearing tributes to the valiant sons who wore the blue or the gray. North and South now unite in keeping fresh the memory of the sleeping heroes. It was at Gettysburg that the decisive battle of the Civil War was fought and it was there decided, after 40,000, men lay dead or wounded on the field, that the republic should live and that disintegration must be halted by the arbitrament of the sword. There our first martyred President declared that the "government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth." It was, voicing the spirit of your martyred President, that you, the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, together with your comrades at arms, took up the unfinished work and highly resolved that they who had died should not have died in vain, that this nations life should be perpetuated and that the stars and stripes should be uplifted higher than ever before.

Fearlessly you followed on to victory and the wounds you received, the sufferings you endured, the scars that you wear today are your badges of honor, your marks of faithful service. Let us not forget, however, that in every contest, in every righteous warfare waged, we have not been fighting alone, The God of nations, has been with us and fighting for us. I firmly believe that we the people of these United States are God's chosen people under the New Testament covenant. To us He has committed the work of emancipating nations and striking the shackles from off the arms of men enslaved. But woe be to us if we forget, and cease to follow His divine leadings.

This leads me to speak of another G. A. R. I mean the Grand Army of the Redeemed they whose names are written in the Lambs Book of Life, enrolled in the Army of the Lord. These are the true heroes of life's warfare. They have fought against flesh and blood with loyalty to their nations, their fellowmen and their God. They have fought against spiritual foes and triumphed over the Prince of Darkness.

The Grand Army of the Republic and the Grand Army of the Redeemed, joined in courage, moved by the Spirit of one common Leader, can never know defeat, neither in time nor in eternity. God grant that with St. Paul when we lay down life's armor we will be able to say. "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give to me at that day!"

"Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

LAID TO REST.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of Mrs. Martha Bayard.

The funeral of Mrs. Martha Johnson Bayard took place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Presbyterian church. There was a large attendance of sorrowing friends and relatives and many beautiful floral tributes were received, among the number being one from the W. C. T. U., of which deceased was a member. Several beautiful floral offerings were also received from friends and relatives in Canton, Ohio.

The services were conducted by Rev. William Laurie D. D. LL. D., assisted by Dr. H. C. Holloway, of the Lutheran church. Dr. Laurie took for his text the 4th chapter and 9th verse of the Epistles to the Hebrews. "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Dr. Laurie spoke very touchingly of the patience, humility and christian character of the deceased.

Dr. Holloway who was a classmate of the deceased at Aaronsburg Academy spoke of the early life of Mrs. Bayard paying her a high compliment.

A quartette composed of Mrs. J. C. Meyer, Miss Henrietta Butts and Messrs Henry Brown and Russell Blair, sang several of the favorite selections of the departed one.

The casket bearers were Gen. John I. Curtin, S. H. Williams, W. W. Montgomery, John P. Harris, S. A. Bell, Wm. P. Humes.

The interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Entertained Senior and Junior Electricals.

Prof. and Mrs. J. P. Jackson entertained the Senior and Junior Electricals in a very delightful manner, at their pleasant home at State College, Wednesday ovening. The first part of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre. The first ladie's prize was won by Mrs. Shoffstall, first gentleman's prize by A. R. Dennington, second ladies' prize by Mrs. Watson, second gentleman's prize by Plank, '05, ladies' consolation prize by Miss Harrison, '07, and gentleman's consolation prize by E R. Ale, '04. Abundant refreshments were served after the playing was over, and the evening was closed with music by Messrs. Shearer, Noble and Ale, and singing by the two classes.

Dr. Young Waives Hearing.

Dr. R. J. Young, of Snow Shoe, charged with false imprisonment and perjury in connection with the recent arrest of Father Victor Zarek of Clarence, waived the hearing which was to have taken place before Justice Keichline Saturday morning at ten o'clock and was bound over to court in the sum of $1 000.

John Uzzle, of Snow Shoe, furnished the bail for Dr. Young.

Quite an array of witnesses and friends of the principals were in town to attend the hearing. The case will probably come up at the August term of court.

GEN. BEAVER THE ORATOR.

Delivered Eloquent Address in Union Cemetery.

THE DAY'S SERVICES

They Were Beautiful and appropriate Interesting Parade—Services at Governor's Graves.

OTHER INTERESTING SPEECHES.

There was a general cessation of business in Bellefonte Monday and Memorial Day was celebrated as never before. Rain slightly marred the pleasures of the day but the exercises took place as previously announced and everything passed off nicely. The Memorial Day services and parade were impressive and successful and hundreds of people lined the streets. The parade moved from the Diamond promptly at 2 p. m. in the following order. Coleville band, carriages containing speakers, Company B. 5th regiment, N. G. P., Gregg Post, Logan Fire Co., and several hundred school children dressed in white and carrying flags.

The services in the cemetery were very impressive and were in charge of Commander Emanuel Noll. Chaplain James Harris offered an earnest prayer and Arthur Brown, a High school student read Lincoln's address at Gettysburg. A quartette composed of L. A. Schaeffer, J. P. Smith, John Bullock and A. Lukenbach sang several selections The soldiers graves were decorated with beautiful flowers and Gen. Beaver delivered one of the most interesting and eloquent addresses ever listened to in Bellefonte on an occasion of this kind.

The exercises were brought to a close with a salute by Company B.

AT CURTIN AND HASTINGS GRAVES.

After the regular exercises services of a touching character were held at the graves of our lamented Governors Curtin and Hastings. On the former's grave a beautiful rose bush was planted, sent by the Ladies Auxiliary of the G. A. R. of Philadelphia. On this grave there also reposed a beautiful maltese cross which is sent each year by the Philadelphia reserve corp. The grave of Gov. Hastings was covered with lovely floral tributes. The address at Curtin's grave was delivered by Col. James P. Coburn, while Col. J. L. Spangler, the life long friend of Hastins, spoke at the General's grave.

Gen. Beaver's address in the cemetery on Memorial Day, was along somewhat new lines and, although it was not written out, he has kindly furnished us a synopsis of its main points, as contained in the skeleton which he used.

After speaking of the unusual privilege of joining with his comrades and neighbors in this service and the gratification which it afforded him, he came at once to the subject of his address which was:

"SOME OF THE COMPENSATIONS OF OUR CIVIL WAR."

God's compensations for great calamities cannot be viewed at short range. This arises from the fact that the finite cannot comprehend the infinite. The perspective of time necessary to view them in their proper relations, so far as our civil war is concerned, has not yet arrived, but we have risen high enough so that we can see far enough, in some degree at least, to discover some of the compensations which come to us of that great struggle. Some of them are plainly apparent and only of such will we venture to speak.

They may be viewed for the purposes of today from three standpoints, and first

FROM THE INDIVIDUAL STANDPOINT.

It is needless to speak, of course, of the great patriotic impulse and ardor which were born of the attack upon the flag at Fort Sumpter and of what followed as the necessities of the war arose and demands were made upon the patriotism of our people. That was universal and apparent at the time as one of the splendid compensations for what was regarded, from the standpoint of the North, as a causeless and unjustifiable attack upon the integrity of our national life.

1. The war developed the heroic element in our nature, and by this is not meant that impulse or conviction which compelled every man to stand in his place and receive in his person what is naturally to be expected in war, but rather that higher development of our humanity which led the man in blue to carry his canteen of water to his wounded antagonist who wore the gray, or that led the man who wore the gray to carry off the body of his wounded antagonist who wore the blue amid the shots of his opponents. The incidents which would illustrate this are numerous but there was no time for indulging in their recital, and indeed, throughout, the address was practically devoid of illustration, because of the fact that the audience was standing and the clouds were lowering.

2. The war awakened and keeps alive real sentiment. The day and its general annual observance, North and South, is the evidence of this. The effect which the observance of the day has had upon the care of the resting places of our dead is manifest to all who have given any attention to the subject, and this is of itself no small compensation for the sorrow which is at the foundation of the sentiment.

In the sermon heard Sunday, the fact was stated that the 30th of May was first inaugurated as Memorial Day by some nurses in Richmond who decorated, by previous arrangement, the graves of prisoners who had been buried on Belle Isle opposite the city in the James River, but it is not generally known, as it ought to be, that in Centre county, on the 4th day of July 1863, at the village of Boalsburg, the first concerted effort, so far as is known, to decorate the graves of soldiers who gave their lives to their country was made by some young girls. One of them made known her intention to decorate the grave of her father with a laurel wreath and immediately the response came "If your father's grave, why not the graves of all the soldiers?" and so these young girls—among them the sister of our departed comrade, Col. D. S. Keller, who tells the story—prepared wreaths and deposited them upon the graves of all the soldiers who were buried in the graveyard near that village. This was simply the outcome of a universal instinct and found expression later in the general custom which was founded and commended by Gen. Logan, the first commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

3. The war bred, and continues to breed, appreciation of the people of different sections. Whatever may have been thought of the bravery of the southern people by those of the north, they had little credit for steadfastness of purpose and stern determination; but, after four years of continuous and heroic devotion to what they believed to be a fundamental right, we were ready to concede to them bravery, honesty of conviction, steadfastness of purpose and a desperate determination; and these combined were, of course, duplicated by those who fought against them for the preservation of the Union, and the possession of these qualities, as well as others growing out of them, is freely acknowledged by both sides; no, not by both sides but they are held in reverence as the inheritance of one people.

4. The war gave birth to and nurtures tolerance of the views and opinions of others. This finds expression in many ways in this generation. It is, in many instances, of slow growth but there can be no question of the increasing toleration of the people of both sections for the views and opinions held by each. A single illustration. In the fervor of patriotic devotion in 1862, the Presbyterian church passed a resolution in their General Assembly aspersing the Christian character of those who took up arms in defence of what they regarded as cardinal principle underlying our government. That resolution was never unreservedly overruled and the aspersion withdrawn until the present month, and the communication of the act of doing so was hailed with manifestations of great delight by the General Assembly of the Southern church, then in session.

FROM THE NATIONAL STANDPOINT.

1. The war made a real union possible. It has never been so previously. The constitution was a compromise and the debatable questions which were raised by the existence of slavery were continually to the fore. Our history furnishes numerous examples of this fact, and congressional debates show that it was always a burning question.

2. It gives breadth of view and possibly unity of action to our statesmanship. When Mr. Cleveland used the ar-

SIR WILSON I. FLEMING.

Grand Commander Received a Beautiful Testimonial from Constans Commandery, K. T.

Bellefonte and Centre county are signally honored in having for a fellow-citizen, the Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of Pennsylvania. This honor was conferred on our townsman Wilson I. Fleming at York, Pa., last week an account of which was given at the time in our news columns. The installation and the ceremonies of the week were unusually brilliant and successful. The city of York was in gala attire and Knight Templar's from all over the State were in attendance. In richness of babilment and trappings and in magnificence of spectacular effect this meeting has never been surpassed. The installation of Grand Commander Fleming took place in the presence of 1800 people. A chorus of 300 voices sang several selections and the installation officer was Rev. Charles James Wood of York. The new Grand Commander made an excellent address.

Grand Commander Fleming is a member of Constans Commandery No 33 K. T., of Bellefonte, and to show their high esteem of Mr. Fleming they presented him with a beautiful and costly sword. The presentation took place at York and Col. Wilbur F. Reeder made the presentation speech. The sword and scabbard bear many beautiful masonic emblems engraved upon them. On the hilt is the Grand Commander's jewel. A knights head in gold surrounded by turquois is in the handle. The handle is of pearl wrapped in gold wire. On the hilt also is the Patriarch's cross emblazoned with saphires. Below the hilt is a beautiful silver plate with an inscription engraved on it stating that the sword was presented by Constans Commandery to Eminent Sir Wilson I. Fleming and giving time and place of presentation. Below the plate are the letters K. T. enameled on a carved gold decoration. At the foot of the scabbard is a Mason's emblem of trowel in blue enamel with gold decorations. There are other decorations and filigree work which make it a work of rare beauty and artistic merit.

It is highly appreciated by Mr. Fleming and will be long cherished in the family and handed down as an heirloom from generation to generation.

Northern Conference.

The Northern Conference of the Lutheran church met at Tusseyville beginning of last week, closing its work Wednesday evening. The attendance of ministers and delegates was good. Great interest was manifested by the members of the Lutheran church and other denominations in whose midst they met, and each session was largely attended.

Conference is not a legislative body, and consequently the work done was the discussion of affairs relative to the spiritual.

The next meeting of the body will be at Hartleton, Union county.

State vs. Watsontown.

One of the most exciting games of base ball ever played in Bellefonte will take place on the Glass Works meadow next Friday afternoon June 3 between the State College team and the Watsontown team. Both are strong nines and the game will be a dandy.

It will be for the benefit of the Bellefonte Hospital. Tickets are now on sale at the drug stores of F. Potts Green, J. Zeller & Son, C. M. Parrish, and Sidney Krumrine. Also at the cigar Stores of Chas. Cruse and Knisely Brothers.

It will be the game of the season in Bellefonte and well deserves patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty

By 4 o'clock next morning Wilbur had the hands at work digging the sand from around the Bertha Millner's

bow. The line by which she was to be warped off was run out to the ledge of the rock, fresh water was taken on, provisions for the marooned beachcombers were cached upon the beach, the dory was taken aboard, gaskets were cast off and hatches battened down.

At high tide, all hands straining upon the warp the schooner was floated off and under touch of the lightest airs drew almost imperceptibly away from the land. They were quite an hour crawling out to the heads of the bay, but here the breeze was freshening. Moran took the wheel, the flying jib and staysail were set, the wake began to whiten under the schooner's stern, the forefoot sang, the Pacific opened out more and more, and by 12:30 o'clock Moran put the wheel over and as the schooner's bow swung to the northward cried to Wilbur:

"Mate, look your last of Magdalena bay!"

Standing at her side, Wilbur turned and swept the curve of the coast with a single glance. The vast, heat scourged hoop of yellow sand, the still, smooth shield of indigo water, with its beds of kelp, had become insensibly dear to him. It was all familiar, friendly and hospitable. Hardly an acre of that sweep of beach that did not hold the impress of his foot. There was the point near by the creek where he and Moran first landed to fill the water casks and to gather abalones; the creek itself, where he had snared quail; the sand spit, with its whitened whale's skull, where he and Moran had beached the schooner, and there, last of all, that spot of black over which still hung a haze of brown gray smoke, the charred ruins of the old Portuguese whaling cabin, where they had outfought the beachcombers.

For a moment Wilbur and Moran looked back without speaking. They stood on the quarter deck in the shadow of the mainsail, shut off from the sight of the schooner's crew and for the instant quite alone.

"Well, Moran, it's goodby to the old place, isn't it?" said Wilbur at length.

"Yes," she said, her deep voice pitched even deeper than usual. "Mate, great things have happened there."

"It doesn't look like a place for a tong row with Chinese pirates, though, does it?" he said, but even as he spoke the words he guessed that that was not what he meant.

"Oh, what did that amount to?" she said, with an impatient movement of her head. "It was there that I first knew myself and knew that, after all, you were a man and I was a woman, and that there was just us—you and I—in the world, and that you loved me and I loved you, and that nothing else was worth thinking of."

Wilbur shut his hand down over hers as it gripped a spoke of the wheel.

"Moran, I knew that long since," he said. "Such a month as this has been! Why, I feel as though I had only begun to live since I began to love you."

"And you do, mate?" she answered. "You do love me and always will? Oh, you don't know," she went on, interrupting his answer, "you haven't a guess, how the last two days have changed me. Something has happened here," and she put both her hands over her breast. "I'm all different here, mate. It's all you inside here—all you! And it hurts, and I'm proud that it does hurt. Oh," she cries of a sudden, "I don't know how to love yet, and I do it very badly, and I can't tell you how I feel because I can't even tell it to myself. But you must be good to me now." The deep voice trembled a little. "Good to me, mate, and true to me, mate, because I've only you, and all of me is yours. Mate, be good to me and always be kind to me. I'm not Moran any more. I'm not proud and strong and independent, and I don't want to be lonely. I want you—I want you always with me. I'm just a woman now, dear—just a woman that loves you with a heart she's just found."

Wilbur could find no words to answer. There was something so pathetic and at the same time so noble in Moran's complete surrender of herself and her dependence upon him, her unquestioned trust in him and his goodness, that he was suddenly smitten with awe at the sacredness of the obligation thus imposed on him. She was his now, to have and to hold, to keep, to protect and to defend—she who was once so glorious of her strength, of her savage isolation, her unviolate, pristine maidenhood. All words seemed futile and inadequate to him.

She came close to him and put her hands upon his shoulders and, looking him squarely in the eye, said:

"You do love me, mate, and you always will?"

"Always, Moran," said Wilbur simply. He took her in his arms, and she laid her cheek against his for a moment, then took his head between her hands and kissed him.

Two days passed. The Bertha Millner held steadily to her northward course, Moran keeping her well in toward the land. Wilbur maintained a lookout from the crow's nest in the hope of sighting some white cruiser or battleship on her way south for target practice. In the cache of provisions he had left for the beachcombers he had inserted a message, written by Hoang, to the effect that they might expect to be taken off by a United States man-of-war within the month.

Hoang did not readily recover his "loss of face." The Bertha's Chinamen would have nothing to do with this member of a hostile tong, and the humiliated beachcomber kept almost entirely to himself, sitting on the fo'c'stle head all day long, smoking his sui-yen-hu and brooding silently to himself.

Moran had taken the lump of ambergris from out Kitchell's old hammock and had slung the hammock itself in the schooner's waist, and Charlie was made as comfortable as possible therein. They could do but little for him, however, and he was taken from time to time with spells of coughing that racked him with a dreadful agony. At length one noon just after Moran had taken the sun and had calculated that the Bertha was some eight miles to the southwest of San Diego she was surprised to hear Wilbur calling her sharply. She ran to him and found him standing in the waist by Charlie's hammock.

The Chinaman was dying and knew it. He was talking in a faint and feeble voice to Wilbur as she came up and was trying to explain to him that he was sorry he had deserted the schooner during the scare in the bay.

"Plenty muchee solly," he said. "China boy, him heap flaid of Feng shui. When Feng shui no likee, we then must go chop-chop. Plenty much solly I leave um schooner that night. Solly plenty—savvy?"

"Of course we savvy, Charlie," said Moran. "You weren't afraid when it came to fighting."

"I die pletty soon," said Charlie calmly. "You say you gib me fifteen hundled dollah?"

"Yes, yes; that was our promise. What do you want done with it, Charlie?"

"I want plenty fine funeral in Chinatown in San Flancisco. Oh, heap fine! You buy um first chop coffin—savvy Silver heap much—cost um big money. You gib my money to Hop Sing association, topside Ming Yen temple. You savvy Hop Sing?"

"Yes, yes."

"Tell um Hop Sing I want funeral—four piecee horse. You no flogettee horse?" he added apprehensively.

"No, I'll not forget the horses, Charlie. You shall have four."

"Want six piecee band musicians—China music—heap plenty gong. You no flogettee? Two piecee priest, all dress um white—savvy? You mus' buy um coffin yo'self. Velly fine coffin, heap much silver, an' four piecee horse. You catchum fireclacker—one, five, seven hundled fireclacker; make um big noise. An' loast pig an' plenty lice an' China blandy. Heap fine funeral,

He took her in his arms.

cost um fifteen hundled dollah. I be bury all same mandarin—all same Little Pete. You plomise, sure?"

"I promise you, Charlie. You shall have a funeral finer than Little Pete's."

Charlie nodded his head contentedly, drawing a breath of satisfaction.

"Bimeby Hop Sing send um body back China." He closed his eyes and lay for a long time, worn out with the effort of speaking, as if asleep. Suddenly he opened his eyes wide. "You no flogettee horse?"

"Four horses, Charlie. I'll remember."

He drooped once more, only to rouse again at the end of a few minutes with:

"First chop coffin, plenty much silver," and again a little later and very feebly, "Six piecee—band music—China music; four piecee—gong—four."

"I promise you, Charlie," said Wilbur.

"Now," answered Charlie—"now I die."

And the low caste Cantonese cooly, with all the dignity and calmness of a Cicero, composed himself for death.

An hour later Wilbur and Moran knew that he was dead. Yet, though they had never left the hammock, they could not have told at just what moment he died.

Later, on that same afternoon, Wilbur, from the crow's nest, saw the lighthouse on Point Loma and the huge, rambling bulk of the Coronado hotel spreading out and along the beach.

It was the outpost of civilization. They were getting back to the world again. Within an hour's ride of the hotel were San Diego, railroads, newspapers and policemen. Just off the hotel, however, Wilbur could discern the gleaming white hull of a United States man-of-war. With the glass he could make her out to be one of the monitors, the Monterey in all probability.

After advising with Moran it was decided to put in to land. The report as to the castaways could be made to the Monterey and Charlie's body forwarded to his tong in San Francisco.

In two hours' time the schooner was well up, and Wilbur stood by Moran's side at the wheel watching and studying the familiar aspect of Coronado beach.

"It's a great winter resort," he told her. "I was down here with a party two years ago. Nothing has changed. You see that big sort of round wing, Moran, all full of windows? That's the dining room. And there's the bathhouse and the bowling alley. See the people on the beach and the girls in white duck skirts, and look up there by the veranda—let me take the glass—yes, there's a tallyho coach. Isn't it queer to get back to this sort of thing after Magdalena bay and the beachcombers?"

Moran spun the wheel without reply and gave an order to Jim to ease off the foresheet.

CHAPTER XII.

THE winter season at the Hotel del Coronado had been unusually gay that year, and the young lady who wrote the society news in diary form for one of the San Francisco papers had held forth at much length upon the hotel's "unbroken succession of festivities." She had also noted that "prominent among the newest arrivals" had been Mr. Nat Ridgeway of San Francisco, who had brought down from the city aboard his elegant and sumptuously fitted yacht Petrel a jolly party, composed largely of the season's debutantes. To be mentioned in the latter category was Miss Josie Herrick, whose lavender coming out tea at the beginning of the season was still a subject of comment among the gossips—and all the rest of it.

The Petrel had been in the harbor but a few days, and on this evening a dance was given at the hotel in honor of her arrival. It was to be a cotillion, and Nat Ridgeway was going to lead with Josie Herrick. There had been a coaching party to Tia Juana that day, and Miss Herrick had returned to the hotel only in time to dress. By 9:30 she emerged from the process—which had involved her mother, her younger sister, her maid and one of the hotel chambermaids—a dainty, firm corseted little body, all tulle, white satin and high piled hair. She carried Marechal Niel roses, ordered by wire from Monterey, and about an hour later, when Ridgeway gave the nod to the waiting musicians and swung her off to the beat of a twostep, there was not a more graceful little figure upon the floor of the incomparable round ballroom of the Coronado hotel.

The cotillion was a great success. The ensigns and younger officers of the monitor, at that time anchored off the hotel, attended in uniform, and enough of the members of what was known in San Francisco as the "dancing set" were present to give the affair the necessary entrain. Even Jerry Haight, who belonged more distinctly to the "country club set" and who had spent the early part of that winter shooting elk in Oregon, was among the ranks of the "rovers," who grouped themselves about the drafty doorways and endeavored to appear unconscious each time Ridgeway gave the signal for a "break."

The figures had gone round the hall once. The "first set" was out again, and as Ridgeway guided Miss Herrick by the "rovers" she looked over the array of shirt fronts, searching for Jerry Haight.

"Do you see Mr. Haight?" she asked of Ridgeway. "I wanted to favor him this break. I owe him two already, and he'll never forgive me if I overlook him now."

Jerry Haight had gone to the hotel office for a few moments' rest and a cigarette and was nowhere in sight. But when the set broke and Miss Herrick, despairing of Jerry, had started out to favor one of the younger ensigns, she suddenly jostled against him pushing his way eagerly across the floor in the direction of the musicians' platform.

"Oh," she cried, "Mr. Haight, you've missed your chance—I've been looking for you!"

But Jerry did not hear. He seemed very excited. He crossed the floor, almost running, and went up on the platform, where the musicians were meandering softly through the mazes of "La Paloma," and brought them to an abrupt silence.

"Here, I say, Haight," exclaimed Ridgeway, who was near by, "you can't break up my figure like that!"

"Gi' me a call there on the bugle," said Haight rapidly to the cornetist. "Anything to make 'em keep quiet a moment."

The cornetist sounded a couple of notes, and the cotillon paused in the very act of the break. The shuffling of feet grew still, and the conversation ceased. A diamond brooch had been found, no doubt, or some supper announcement was to be made. But Jerry Haight, with a great sweep of his arm, the forgotten cigarette between his fingers, shouted out breathlessly:

"Ross Wilbur is out in the office of the hotel!"

There was an instant's silence and then a great shout. Wilbur found! Ross Wilbur come back from the dead! Ross Wilbur, hunted for and bootlessly traced from Buenos Ayres in the south to the Aleutian islands in the north; Ross Wilbur, the puzzle of every detective bureau on the coast, the subject of a thousand theories, whose name had figured in the scare heads of every newspaper west of the Mississippi; Ross Wilbur, seen at a fashionable tea and his club of an afternoon, then suddenly blotted out from the world of men, swallowed up and engulfed by the unknown, with not so much as a button left behind; Ross Wilbur, the suicide; Ross Wilbur, the murdered; Ross Wilbur, victim of a band of kidnapers, the hero of some dreadful story that was never to be told, the mystery, the legend—behold he was there, back from the unknown, dropped from the clouds, spewed up again from the bowels of the earth, a veritable god from the machine who in a single instant was to disentangle all the unexplained complications of those past winter months!

"Here he comes!"

"Here he comes!" shouted Jerry, his eyes caught by a group of men in full dress and gold lace who came tramping down the hall to the ballroom, bearing a nondescript figure on their shoulders. "Here he comes—the boys are bringing him in here! Oh!" he cried, turning to the musicians, "can't you play something—anything? Hit it up for all you're worth! Ridgeway—Nat—look here! Ross was Yale, y' know—Yale '95. Ain't we enough Yale men here to give him the yell?"

Out of all time and tune, but with a vigor that made up for both, the musicians banged into a patriotic air. Jerry, standing on a chair that itself was standing on the platform, led half a dozen frantic men in the long thunder of the "Brek-kek-kek-kex, co-ex, co-ex!"

Around the edges of the hall excited girls, and chaperons themselves no less agitated, were standing up on chairs and benches, splitting their gloves and breaking their fans in their enthusiasm, while every male dancer on the floor—ensigns in their gold faced uniforms and "rovers" in starched and immaculate shirt bosoms—cheered and cheered and struggled with one another to shake hands with a man whom two of their number, old Yale grads., with memories of athletic triumphs yet in their minds, carried into that ballroom, borne high upon their shoulders.

And the hero of the occasion, the center of all this enthusiasm, thus carried as if in triumph into this assembly in evening dress, in white tulle and whiter kid, odorous of delicate sachets and scarce perceptible perfumes, was a figure unhandsome and unkempt beyond description. His hair was long and hanging over his eyes; a thick, uncared for beard concealed the mouth and chin. He was dressed in a Chinaman's blouse and jeans, the latter thrust into slashed and tattered boots. The tan and weather beatings of nearly half a year of the tropics were spread over his face, a partly healed scar disfigured one temple and cheekbone; the hands, to the very finger nails, were gray with grime; the jeans and blouse and boots were fouled with grease, with oil, with pitch and all manner of the dirt of an uncared for ship. And as the dancers of the cotillon pressed about and a hundred kid gloved hands stretched toward his own palms there fell from Wilbur's belt upon the waxed floor of the ballroom the knife he had so grimly used in the fight upon the beach, the ugly stains still blackening on the haft.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.
If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.
Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.
I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy I seldom need it, as it has cured me.

WAR NEWS.

Happenings in the War Between Russia and Japan.

London, May 27.—The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Express says it is reported unofficially that the Japanese have captured Kin Chou and are now attacking Dalny.

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Mail, under date of May 26, says: "According to a reliable report the Japanese occupied Kin Chou to-day."

The Shan Kai war correspondent of the Daily Chronicle sends a report received from New Chwang that on May 23, thinking that the Japanese had retired from Fen Wang Chang, 15,000 Russians from Hai-Cheng and Liao Yang marched towards Feng Wang Cheng. They were surprised by 20,000 Japanese in the Tatung pass.

The Russian casualties were 4,000, and over 1,000 Russians surrendered. The dispatch does not state the Japanese losses.

The New Chwang correspondent of the Daily Mail in a dispatch dated May 23 says that coincident with the Japanese advance in the direction of Liao Yang there has been a concentration of all the available Russian troops between Liao Yang and Mao Tien pass, and that the fortifications of Liao Yang are being feverishly hurried.

The railway betwen Tatschisia and Liao Yang is still intact, but every preparation has been made for its immediate destruction in the event of the necessity for a retreat to Mukden.

The correspondent says that under cover of a continual naval patrol secret landing operations are in progress on the west coast of the Liao Tung peninsula.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—The following dispatch from Viceroy Alexieff, dated May 26, has been received by the emperor:

"Reports from Rear Admiral Wittsoeft and Grigorovitch Thursday state that the enemy bombarded from In-Gen-Tsi bay (on the west coast of the Kwang-Tung peninsula, thirteen miles north of Port Arthur) with gunboats.

(The viceroy's dispatch does not give the date of the bombardment.)

"On the following night the Japanese attempted to block the roadstead of Port Arthur with mines and from shore observations it is believed that some steam launches and torpedo boats were sunk.

"Between May 18 and May 21 the Russians cleared eleven of the enemy's mines from the roadstead.

"The boats of the merchant steamer Amur, with a dredger and a steam launch have been brought to Port Arthur from Dalny."

London, May 27.—No authoritative confirmation of the capture of Kin Chou has yet been received from any quarter. Circumstantial accounts of the storming and capture of Kin Chou, identical with the reports received by the Central News from Tokio, are sent by the Shanghai correspondents of the Standard and Daily Telegraph.

The Morning Post's Tokio correspondent says that the Japanese occupied Kin Chou Thursday afternoon and are advancing to attack the Russians occupying the heights south of the town.

The Standard's Tokio correspondent, cabling at 9:30 o'clock Thursday night says: "It is reported that the Japanese have occupied Kin Chou. Official confirmation of the rumor is expected hourly."

Tokio, May 28.—Subsequent reports received here indicate that the storming of Nan Shan Hill Thursday was a bloody affair. The Japanese first centered their fire on the Russian batteries, in which work they were aided by four gunboats in the Kin Chou bay. They succeeded in silencing many of the enemy's guns.

The Russians had constructed a series of trenches around the hill on a terrace protected by wire entanglements and other such devices.

The Japanese made a series of rushes, but they were in vain. The deadly rifle and cannon fire of the enemy checked them repeatedly. Finally at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Japanese reformed and stormed the crest of the hill. The Russians held to their position doggedly and it was 7 o'clock in the evening before the Japanese finally gained possession of the ridge.

A Japanese officer of high rank made the following statement to the correspondent of the Associated Press.

"The Japanese in attacking Kin Chou and Nan-Shan hill, had to fight against great odds.

"The Russians were in full command of the strategical advantages afforded by nature, and these advantages were augmented by the newest inventions for defense. The forts on Nan Shan Hill were armed with heavy guns. The Japanese had only field guns, heavy guns being unavailable on account of the difficulties of transportation

"Our army deserves great credit for having driven the Russians from this stronghold. It was a feat previously considered to have been impossible."

"I fear our losses have been heavy, but we have gained the strongest point barring our way to the investment of Port Arthur."

LONDON, May 28.—A dispatch to the News from Harbin says the Japanese losses during the fighting at Kin Chou are said to be twelve thousand men killed. It is said that these figures have been confirmed by an official dispatch. Fighting, it is added, is still going on in the vicinity of Kin Chou.

The Russian resistance at Nan Shan Hill was stubborn. The Japanese made a series of assaults before the Russians finally yielded the positions. The Russians abandoned this hill at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, retreating toward Nequan Ling, where it is understood a second line of defense exists.

The Russians may rally at this line of defenses unless they have been overwhelmed by the defeat at Kin Chou and Nanshan.

The Russians had a series of mines planted at Tafangshan station on the railroad which were exploded. The station was destroyed. The Japanese forces were under fire for sixteen hours.

The General Staff here has received telegrams from the commanders commending the bravery and fortitude of their men.

Rothrock Quits Forestry Office.

Harrisburg, May 28.—Governor Pennypacker has accepted the resignation of Dr. J. T. Rothrock, of West Chester as state forestry commissioner, after having had it under consideration since Feb. 15. He appointed in Dr. Rothrock's place Robert S. Conklin, of Columbia, the present deputy commissioner.

Conklin has selected as deputy Irwin C. Williams of Royersford, a clerk in the forestry department. All of these changes go into effect June 1.

Dr. Rothrock will not be entirely lost to the state service, for he has been appointed by the governor a member of the state forestry reserve commission, in place of secretary of internal affairs Isaac B. Brown, resigned.

The reason for Dr. Rothrock's resignation is a breakdown in health. He resigned during the last session of the legislature, but the Governor prevailed upon him to reconsider. He has been at the head of the forestry commission in this state since its inception, and has served as forestry commissioner under the last four governors.

Competitive Drill.

On Wednesday afternoon the yearly competitive drill between the four companies of the battalion was held on the front campus, at State College. The exercises were begun with a review of the entire battalion, Captain Lawton and Major Morrissey being assisted in the review by Col. Reeder and Col. Chambers of Bellefonte, both members of the Governor's Staff, and Major Cavenaugh, of the regular army, who were present to act as judges to decide which company was the best drilled.

After the review, the competitive drill took place and the excellent manner in which each company went through the various movements showed the thorough training that has been given them in the past year. After this drill was over, the individual drill in the manual of arms came off. The object of this competition was to determine what private is the best trained in the manual of arms the prize to consist of a gold medal to be held by the winner till next year, when it will be turned over to the best drilled private in next year's battalion. N. P. McCallum, '07, was the lucky fellow this year After this part of the program was over the judges announced the results of the company drills by awarding first prize, a banner and a sword to Company D, J. Frank Tritle, Captain, and second prize, a sword to Company C, E. S. Bomberger, Captain. The exercises of the day were ended by dress parade.

Wabash Trains Enter Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, May 28.—The last spike in the tracks of the Wabash railroad, connecting Pittsburg and the Mingo Junction 41 miles away, was driven shortly after noon Thursday. There remains now but a little construction work to do in the vicinity of Mingo Junction and the connecting link with Pittsburg will be complete and Wabash passenger and freight trains can come directly into this city.

Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock the tracks were laid on the Pittsburg side of the bridge. The work was then completed except for about 300 feet inside the Mt. Washington tunnel. Three special gangs were set to work on this, and shortly after noon had laid the last tie and driven the last spike. The construction train which had been following the workmen through the tunnel then emerged at the Pittsburg end amid cheers.

The appearance of the first Wabash train on the Pittsburg side of the river is of special significance, as it shows the road has accomplished its efforts to gain an entrance into Pittsburg. The obstacles placed in its path have been many, but the road has at last realized its dream of a Pittsburg terminal.

The building of the road of about 60 miles will have cost something like $22,000,000.

Damages are Greater Than First Reported.

Reports of the severity of the storms that passed over this section of the state on Wednesday afternoon continue to be received. At Rauchtown, in the lower end of Clinton county, the house of A. D. Smith, the liveryman, was struck and Mr. Smith, who was lying on a lounge, was rendered unconscious. His escaped from death was miraculous, as the force of the bolt tore the shoes from his feet. At Jamestown a cold bolt struck the house of Jacob Henner and knocked down a horse which was standing in his blacksmith shop nearby.

The large bank barn of Abraham Eckard in Hepburn township, Lycoming county, was struck by lightning at 1 o'clock Thursday morning, and completely destroyed, together with a large amount of hay and grain, a fine two-year-old colt, three calves, and a number of improved farming implements. The destruction was total. There is a partial insurance.

Near Punxsutawney during the storm Wednesday afternoon the lightning struck a small Italian boy and injured him so badly he died three hours later.

Fire in Coburn Band Hall.

Early on Sunday morning May 22nd the Coburn band hall, at Coburn, was discovered to be on fire, and only by using prompt measures to extinguish it was the hall saved from being entirely destroyed.

The fire started in a closet in the building in which the band kept its music and had made considerable progress before discovered, How the fire started is unknown.

Beyond the band losing considerable of its music the damage to the building was slight.

MINING ACCIDENT.

Ten Miners Overcome by Gas at Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 26.—A telegram received at the Susquehanna Coal Company's offices, in this city, Wednesday evening, states that ten miners were suffocated by gas and sulphur fumes from a small locomotive Wednesday evening in the workings of the Summit Branch Coal Company, at Williamstown, near Harrisburg.

The accident was one of the most peculiar in the history of the anthracite mines, and no reason for it can be assigned by the officials. The victims include Michael Golden, general inside foreman of the company, and nine miners and laborers.

The tunnel in which the disaster occurred, is one mile in length, and is used by the coal company to convey the coal mined in the working in the Bear Valley to the breaker in the Williams Valley. The men employed in the mines in the Bear Valley, who resides in Williamstown, have made a practice for years to ride to and from their work on the trips of cars that are hauled between the two valleys by small locomotives.

About 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon General Inside Foreman Golden, and about fifty miners boarded a loaded trip which was about to be hauled from Bear Valley to Williamstown. Everything went all right until about half the journey was made, when some of the men attracted the attention of the engineer, who at once stopped, and it was found that nearly every man in the party on the cars had been overcome by the gas and sulphur, which emanated from the stack of the locomotive and floated back over them. The engineer at once crowded on all the steam possible and the unconscious men were hurried to the Williamstown end of the tunnel with all the speed possible. Here help was at once summoned and the men were taken to the surface where a corps of physicians made every possible effort to resuscitate them, but came too late for Foreman Golden and the other victims.

The tunnel has been in constant operation for more than forty years, and this is the first accident of any kind that has happened in it. It is perfectly free from mine gases, and ventilation is so perfect, and the air current so strong and steady, that besides being used for hauling cars, the tunnel has formed one of the in-takes that furnish air to the mines. No trouble has ever been experienced before from gas from the small mine locomotives, and the officials are entirely at sea as to the cause of the tragedy Wednesday evening.

All the telephone and telegraph wires leading to Williamstown, were put out of service by a storm Wednesday afternoon, and Williamstown was cut off until Wednesday evening, when the Pennsylvania Railroad Company restored its telegraph service.

For over a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has sold largely more than any Blood purifier or Stomach tonic Bigger sales today than ever before. Do that not the true test? Cures others why not you? makes rich blood!

AN IMITATION OF NATURE'S METHOD of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative extract of herbs and roots, without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Along with its use one should take exercise in the outdoor air, get all one can of God's sunlight and air; a mild breathing exercise practiced each day. This "Medical Discovery" gives no false stimulation, because it does not contain alcohol or a narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Instead of a cod liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this tonic has a pacifying action upon the sensitive stomach and gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains one's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and, in this way, fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

No matter how powerful the intellect or the resources of intellectual power, it must be backed up by physical force. Every day the youth or man must manufacture a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is pure, stimulating to the brain, and that can rebuild the tissues that were destroyed in yesterday's work.

"I have been a sufferer from indigestion for some thirty years, at times," writes Mr. S. W. Mullenax, of Circleville, W. Va., "and have used medicine from several of our best physicians, which gave me only a little temporary relief. They said I could never be cured. Last winter I was stricken with the worst spell that I ever had. I suffered with such severe pains in the pit of my stomach that I could neither work nor sleep, and my weight went down from one hundred and ninety-five pounds to one hundred and sixty pounds in about two months' time. I then concluded that I would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By the time the first bottle was gone, I felt some relief from my severe suffering so continued until I had used four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets.' I am truly thankful for the great benefit which I have received from your medicine, and can cordially recommend it to others."

More Troubles for the Farmer.

It seems that there is to be no end to woes and vexations of our farmers. No sooner have the braced themselves up to face the privations and troubles that short wheat crop is sure to bring them, than they waken up to a realization of the fact that there is something wrong with the corn, which in many instances shows no signs of sprouting. Whether it was faulty seed, the cold rains or whatever it might be attributed to, the fact stares many of them in the fact that unless a replanting is resorted too there will be a total failure of the corn crop, throughout the entire upper end of the county, in College, Ferguson, Half-moon and Patton townships it may be the same in other parts—we have not heard. And the great trouble is there is no doubt as to whether this condition is not chargeable to the seed which, many fear, was injured by the severe winter. If this theory is correct there will be trouble in securing perfect seed to replant with. In addition to this discouragement about the corn a new disease very much a-kin-to distemper, has broken out among the horses. The animal will be taken out of the stable seemingly well and in good condition and in a few hours will be coughing, discharging at the nose and stiffened up so that it can scarcely move. In some instances the leaders along the neck, over the breast and down the legs become so swollen that the breast is rendered almost helpless. So far the veterinarians or others are unable to tell just what the cause is or how general the disorder may become. The only thing they are certain about is that it comes very suddenly and renders the horses entirely useless. A remedy that some say has proven effective in cerain cases is liberal doses of pine-tree tar, or the strong extracts of tar that are procurable at the drug storet.

Struck by Lightning.

The heavy storm which swept over Bald Eagle Valley Wednesday afternoon was the most severe in many years. The fall of hail was heavy and the rain fell in torrents for a short time. During the storm the house of Rev. Gross, of Howard, was struck by lightning and he and his mother-in-law were both severely shocked by the electric current. The house was somewhat damaged in the interior, much of the plastering being knocked from the walls and ceiling.

Several large pine trees at the cemetery below Howard were struck. Both the Bell and Commercial telephone lines were put out of business for a short time. Rev. Gross and his mother-in law have fully recovered from the effects of the shock they received.

—And now for three months of vacation.

THE PASSING OF SENATOR QUAY.

The political world stands shocked today over the passing of Senator Matthew S. Quay, who expired at his home at Beaver, Saturday. His loss to the nation will be largely of a political nature, since his brilliant leadership and splendid power to harmonize has often been of great service to the Republican party. Senator Quay was not a statesman in the strictest sense although he was a man of many broad views and in his long career in the senate, did much to bring this nation from the ranks of second class powers and place her among the foremost on earth.

In Pennsylvania, Senator Quay has been a political power for more than 30 years. His great ability as a leader and fashioner of men quickly marked him for a brilliant career after his advent in the state capitol, 32 years ago. Since that time he has fought and won many great political victories when the odds against him seemed overwhelming.

It was this ability to win out under all circumstances which inspired the tremendous confidence his henchmen had in his leadership. It is said of the dead senator, that he never forgot a friend or failed to remember a foe. His ability to win to his side enemies who were powerful enough to seriously disarrange his plans, was one of the secrets of the formation of that powerful political combination which his enemies commonly styled "the Quay machine."

Republicanism in Pennsylvania received a severe blow in Senator Quay's death. Undoubtedly his mantle will fall on some younger man. Many have been spoken of, but the shrewdest person cannot say today "here is a successor to Senator Quay." Governor Pennypacker is required by law to call an extraordinary session of the legislature, within 60 days, for the purpose of electing a successor.

Without regard to the fierce prejudice that existed in many minds against the dead Senator, his friends knew him to be mild and kindly, devoted to his family and a great lover of literature. His record in the Civil War showed him to be a man of intrepid bravery. His worst enemies cannot look on the strong leonine face in the casket without admitting that above all things else "this was a man."

my of the United States to enforce the laws of the United States within the state of Illinois during the Chicago riots, without demand by the state authorities—the identical thing which Abram Lincoln had done in 1861—the men who first endorsed his action in doing so were Gen. John B. Gordon, of Georgia, and Major John W. Daniel, of Virginia, both of them distinguished officers in the Confederate service. Later illustrations are found in our Spanish war and still later in the legislation leading to the consummation of the plans for our Isthmian canal.

3. It will bring independent political thought and action to the southern people. It is perhaps too early to expect this now but the events which have occurred in our late history are clearly indicative of the coming of the day when men will divide along the lines of political action which they regard as involving the interests of the nation instead of along sectional lines which, for a generation, have controlled and perhaps naturally controlled them in their treatment of national questions.

4. The war made the country commercially one. At the time of the war the only railroads crossing Mason & Dixon's line which I can recall were the Northern Central, running from Harrisburg to Baltimore, and the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore, which ran from Philadelphia to the latter city. There they terminated and, in order to get to Washington, you were compelled to cross the city of Baltimore by horses attached to the cars or in a cab. Now some of our greatest lines of travel follow the courses of our mountains and rivers north and south and the traffic between the two sections is constantly increasing and has assumed colossal proportions.

5. The war added the south to our national domain for the purposes of emigration and has opened up a vast expanse of territory for settlement by our enterprising emigrants. The west is practically exhausted and progressive farmers who have reached the limit of their ability to purchase lands in such states as Iowa and Illinois are endeavoring to provide for their boys in the future by selling their farms in the west and purchasing larger holdings of real estate in Texas. Only yesterday I read of a farmer from Iowa who had sold his farm there for ninety dollars per acre, and was going to southwestern Texas, where he could purchase just as good land for twelve dollars, thus providing for all of his boys and leaving a surplus for himself and his wife in their old age

6 The war brought the emancipation of a race, and this brings us to the consideration of the question

FROM THE RACE STANDPOINT.

It is too soon to determine the compensations for the abolition of slavery to those most directly interested. 250 years of slavery cannot be atoned for in a generation nor can a race enslaved and degraded for a quarter of a millenium be expected to rise to the full dignity and responsibility of their manhood in half a century. One thing is certain, we of the north must help the south to bear the "white man's burden"

First, We must help educate and uplift the race.

Second, We must be tolerant of the views of the south in regard to the way in which this is to be done.

Third, We must give credit to the people of the south for an interest in and desire to help in this great movement upon which their own safety and welfare for the future depend.

One of the most significant and promising signs of the times is the assistance which is given by our northern people to Booker Washington and other leaders of the colored people in the south in their effort to educate them along the lines which will fit them for the highest service to their race and country.

Finally, it devolves upon those who took part in the great struggle to see as clearly as possible and to take advantage as fully as possible of the bright lining to the dark cloud which so long overshadowed our nation and, so far as in them lies, to make our country worth living for which they at one time thought was worth dying for.

Turn Backward

By GREGORY HUMES

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"Ten years have changed you—for the better," said the woman.

"It has left you untouched," said the man smilingly.

The woman smiled. At thirty time is not necessarily a woman's enemy, and she felt that what the man said was true. Her beauty was a little more full blown, but it was in comparison to that of her youth as the perfect rose is to the opening bud.

For the man time had worked just the change she wished to see. True, the buoyant spirit of youth had gone from his eyes, and she would never again see the star shine in them when he spoke of his hopes, his ambitions and his love for her. Now they were clear and steadfast, looking out on the world with the confidence of a soul that has proved its strength. His hair was touched with gray over the temples, but his face was ruddy with health.

"It is strange that we should meet here in the very shadow of St. Michael's," said the woman.

"Yes," said the man, "it is strange. We were to have been married in St. Michael's. Do you remember that older time?"

They were walking leisurely up the shaded avenue, and it was some mo-

"LET US NOT SPEAK OF THOSE OLD STORIES," SAID SHE.

ments before the woman replied. Then she said softly and without looking at him:

"A woman never forgets the older time, but I had thought that it was different with men. You know that hackneyed quotation, 'Love is of man's life a thing apart; 'tis woman's whole existence.'"

It is not often that a man notices a woman's dress, but love made this man's faculties keen, and he noted with a joyful start that the woman's costume was a sort of half mourning. He did not answer her last remark, but said:

"You are wearing half mourning."

He was looking at her with a keen hope in his eyes that the woman easily read when she glanced up at him. Lowering her eyes and veiling them with the long lashes so that he could not see the curious faint smile in them, she said, with a conventional sigh:

"Yes, for my grandfather, who died recently. You had not heard of his death?"

"No, I have heard nothing from any one in the city for several years. I kept up a correspondence with one or two of my friends for a few years and then it dropped away and died a natural death. When I noticed your half mourning I thought for a moment"—

He did not finish the remark, except with a sort of half sigh that the woman heard and understood perfectly. The curious smile in her downcast eyes became more pronounced.

The man went on, this time a little bitterly:

"'Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,' you say, and yet it seems that I have better kept alive the memory of that older time of which you spoke. You married Carlton within a year of the breaking of our engagement, and never gave me a chance to explain the accusations that were brought against me. I, at least, have so well remembered that I have never married."

"I was unjust," said the woman, "but remember that I was very young and knew very little of the world and of the men and women who go to make it. It can do no wrong to you nor to—to Mr. Carlton to say that I have learned since that I was all in the wrong. I would have called you back, John, but my pride would not let me. I waited until hope died and then I married Carlton, who had been, as you know, devoted to me for a long time. I thought it for the best, but perhaps I was mistaken. Perhaps it would have been better to have waited and waited."

The man looked down at her in surprise. His sense of honor was too keen to permit him to make love to another man's wife and it was a shock to his memories of this woman for her to talk in this way. She had married Carlton, a man whom he despised, and it was not for him to say anything to which the most jealous husband might object. He loved the woman, and he was not willing that anything should be said by either her or himself that would make the old worship die away.

It was possible that the woman read some of this train of thought in his face, for she looked up at him once more. In her eyes was a curious smile.

They had reached her house, and she asked him to come in.

"Thanks," he said, "but I fancy that it will be impossible for me to do so. I shall endeavor to catch the 12:15 train for the west."

There was a cold dignity in his manner.

"You used to know Mr. Carlton, did you not?" asked the woman demurely.

"Yes," replied the man, a trifle grimly; "I knew him, but we were never friends. I may err in my suspicions, but I have always thought that it was he who told you the stories about me which made you break our engagement."

"Let us not speak of those old stories," said she softly. The smile was gone out of her eyes now. "Nor can I listen to anything against Mr. Carlton. He loved me in his own way, I think, and, after all, he was my husband, and a woman can never forget that. I think that of the dead we should speak no evil."

"Of the dead?" said the man in quick astonishment. "You mean"—

"Mr. Carlton died five years ago."

"But you told me that your half mourning was for your grandfather."

"So I did, and so it is. I did not think it necessary to wear mourning for my hus—for Mr. Carlton for five years. But there are the chimes on St. Michael's saying that it is noon. You will have scant time in which to catch your train. So goodby. I wish you all happiness."

The woman extended her hand, and the man took it and said:

"Don't you know the sir the chimes are ringing? They are saying, 'Backward, turn backward, O Time, in thy flight.' Can't we make old Father Time go back for us some ten years?"

"Time can never be turned back," said the woman seriously. But there was a tender light in her eyes which the man loved to see.

"If that is the case," he said, "we must begin all over again and bid defiance to time."

Side by side they stood and listened until the chimes had flung out their last note; then they entered the house together.

English Battle Axes.

What was the great weapon used by the Englishman at Hastings? With what weapon was he armed for the most part when he dealt such deadly blows upon the Norman horsemen in the earlier part of the day? As to the answer to this question we are left in no doubt. History and tradition alike ascribe his long resistance to one weapon, and one weapon alone, the famous Danish ax.

With one exception every single act of valor which the Englishman achieved at Hastings was wrought with the ax or the gisarme. As the Norman weapon was the lance, so the English was the ax. "The Normans," says Harold to his brother Gurth, "are good vassals, valiant on foot and on horse. They have long lances and swords, and we have sharp axes and great edged bills." A few lines further on we read that the English were armed with "hache or gisarme," "with axes and well cutting gisarmes."—Contemporary Review.

Not Square.

The Teuton is a long time in learning British idioms. One who had been here for a year or more and could speak some English before his arrival—a very short and corpulent man, by the way—went to his grocer's and paid a bill which had been standing for several weeks.

"Now you are all square, sir."

"I vas vat?"

"You are square, I said."

"I vas square?"

"Yes, you are all square now."

Hans was silent for a moment, then, with reddening face and flashing eyes, he brought his plump fist down upon the counter and said:

"See here, mine frent, I will hav no more peezness mit you. I treat you like a shentleman. I pay my pill, und you make a shoke of me. You say I vas square ven I know I vas round as a parrel. I don't like such shokes. My peezness mit you vas done."—Tit-Bits.

When the white fronted and snow geese are seen migrating northward, there is always warm weather not far behind them. They are the most reliable of all wild fowl in this particular.

Peaches and plums from Cape Town were to be had on the Cleveland (O.) market fresh and nice, brought from Africa in cold storage, this during February, which is the South African fall of the year.

There is nothing now here or ever likely to be here in the line of transportation which can compete with a trolley car which will stop at any farmhouse and take on the farmer's wife and her basket of eggs.

Tastes differ much in the matter of flowers. For us we like the canna, a geranium bed, a group of branching asters, by all means a bed of salvias, pansies and nasturtiums. There are many others, but these will always reward one.

CORRESPONDENCE

HOWARD.

While cutting wood on the mountain Tuesday J. Z. Loder injured himself by cutting his foot.

A heavy thunder storm visited our town Wednesday afternoon and the electrical display was such that the citizens do not care to witness soon again. The residence of Rev, H. W. Gross was struck by lightning and one room was badly damaged. During the afternoon and evening a dozen or more bolts found mark in and about town.

The lateness of the season has greatly retarded the blooming of the wild flowers and material for decorating will be scarce.

Tuesday evening Mr. Mead, agent for Chas Kiehl, a confectioner of Williamsport, was in Howard setting up a peanut roaster for A. C. Longee and while here learned the names of several of the persons who had "worked" the Zeno chewing gum machines. On Wednesday he secured warrants for their arrest, and the boys were taken before 'Squire Schenck, who found them guilty of malicious mischief and fined two of them one dollar each, and costs on three. It makes chewing gum costly to pay such a price but it is a good thing to make an example of some of the boys when they become too mischievous. It is reported that in Beech Creek the machine, gum and all were taken.

There is at present much talk about the proposed brick works. Whether or not a plant will be erected here is merely a matter of conjecture.

Mary and Joe were on the go,
To some little town of course you know,
And on the way, its hard to say,
If Joe remembered 'twas Memorial Day.
They passed o'er brook and up the hill,
And finally landed at Unionville.
After a few hours rest and talk you know,
Joe says, "Mary we had better go."
They hitched the horse and started that night,
And the way they drove was a holy fright
With Confers skate they drove in late,
Thus, ended the journey in full to date.

A spirit of boycotting is being carried on between the merchants and ice cream vendors, in our village. Instead of obeying the mild injunction to do unto the needy, as they would do unto you, they are trying to do up others, and have all themselves or nothing, regardless of worth, station, creed or denomination.

A week ago Saturday eve a 38 calibre bullet shot from a gun at the farm of James Bechdel, penetrated the house of Mrs. Laura Bechdel struck a cherry table in the ice cream parlor and bounded back a short distance from the wall where it was found by that lady about 15 minutes after the crash was heard. Had any one been seated at the table at that time it would have meant certain death to them.

At half past six o'clock in the evening the procession formed at the hotel, Company B., taking the lead, followed by the veterans, and they Golden Eagles. While the veterans were strewing flowers on the graves of our heroic dead a shower of rain came on compelling the large audience to seek shelter. Through the kindness of some of the members of the Methodist church the house was lighted up thither the large crowd repaired. After prayer by Rev. Grees of the Reformed church, the marshal introduced Mr. A. A. Dale, who delivered a masterly speech, which was listened to with wrapt attention. The services closed with benediction by Rev. Academy Base Ball Team a Winner.

The Bellefonte Academy nine has developed into a winning team.

Three victories on strange grounds in succession and by decisive scores show the improvement the Academy boys have made recently both in fielding and batting. Last Saturday they defeated Bellwood at Bellewood 17-1 and Monday played the strong Snow Shoe team at the latter place and won by the score of 12 4. The hard hitting and good fielding of the victors tell the whole story. Burns was invincible and every other Academy player was at his best. The treatment by the crowd and the umpire was all that could have been wished for.

The spectators seemed to enjoy the clean playing of Bellefonte.

The line up was as follows:

McCandless, catcher; Burns, pitcher; Heinle 1st; Ferguson, 2nd; Lauder (capt) 3rd; Gilliland, ss; Roeloffs, left field; Leathers, centre field; Meek, right field;

This Saturday Bellwood plays here, next Wednesday Snow Shoe will play a return game here and the following Saturday Juniata College plays in Bellefonte,

The Seedless Apple.

Colorado is much interested in a seedless apple that has been developed in that State, and there is great demand for the bud or graft, as that is the only way it can be propagated. The seedless orange has had a remarkable sale, and the apple may be equally successful. The lack of seeds will get rid of the codling moths, which feed on the seeds. This apple is free from blossoms, which will, it is said, make it immune from injury by late frosts. Other seedless fruits will probably be brought out in time.

Mr, and Mrs. C. F. Yorke, of Warriorsmark, and his mother, Mrs. M. C. Yorke, of Sherman, Michigan, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Noll of North Allegheny street.

THE BACK NUMBER.

The House-Bound Woman. Attention a Woman Should Pay to Dress, to Books, to Public Questions.

BY CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK,

Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents,

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Herrick.)

Sometimes the back number is a man. Generally it is a woman. I am not going to try to explain why this is the case. There may be a variety of reasons. The first one that presents itself to me is that women lead too much of a shut-in life and do not have enough outside interests to occupy them.

When a woman has little children it is natural and proper that she should be a great deal at home. Her duties keep her there. But oddly enough, that is not usually the time when she is a back number. Unless she is of a hopelessly vegetable type she is interested in her babies and in other women's babies. She is keen to learn new things about housekeeping and home conveniences and she wants to dress as well as circumstances will permit and to have her friends come in and see her and the newest baby. She probably takes at least one woman's paper and reads it diligently and perhaps sends an occasional contribution to the house-keepers' column. As her children grow a little older and begin going to school she reads up on new educational methods and is proud and happy that her boy and girl are to have this and that advantage.

When the children grow older and the girl goes away to school or comes home afterwards and when the boy goes into college or into business, she is deeply interested in all that concerns them,—their dress, their pursuits and their friends.

Up to this stage she is certainly not a back number. We have seen her before and after she has crossed the "dead line," and even if we do not understand why the change comes we are quick to recognize its effects.

In the first place the woman grows careless about her dress. She is not untidy, but she does not take a healthful interest in the fashions. She looks what I heard one woman call "don't care-ish." That describes her very well. She doesn't care about her dress, so long as it is clean and whole. She doesn't care about questions of public interest. She doesn't read the papers. She knows nothing of what is going on in the great world. She is inclined to be a little peevish or querulous, possibly. She feels that she is not of much use.

Although most women do not recognize the fact, the time when they begin to be back numbers is long before they get there. The disease is one of slow growth. It shows itself first when the mother ceases to throw herself into the pursuits of her children, and takes it for granted that since they have their friends she is not needed. When she leaves the room in the evening because Bessie or Mary is expecting callers, when she does not share in her daughter's interest in their new frocks or new companions, when she fails to join in her son's enthusiasm over base ball or foot ball and to listen with keen interest to what "this fellow" said or "that fellow" did, when she comes to the point that she can no longer be a girl with her girls or a boy with her boys, she is well on the way to a confirmed case of "back numberitis." Her condition demands heroic treatment and her children rarely dare apply it,—or perhaps it does not occur to them. It is an exceptionally clear-sighted son or daughter who does not accept the mother as she is without making an effort to change her.

Even when the effort does come from the daughter the mother does not always respond kindly to it. For one of the symptoms of back numberitis is resentment of criticism.

And it must be owned that the experience is not one of unmixed gratification. We all of us like to be well thought of. And for a mother who has thought pretty well of herself for years,—even if she has not owned it,—to be called to order by her young daughter for a fault in pronunciation or in grammar or for the cut of her skirt or the sort of stock she wears or the old fashioned way in which she does her hair, is not the pleasantest experience one could select if one were searching for pleasant experiences.

Yet such medicine is good for the soul. It is part of the heroic treatment that is to save one from becoming a back number. As soon as one reaches the point where criticism is resented and ignored, growth and improvement are practically at an end.

The other day I saw one woman who declines such physic. She is perhaps sixty years old and she has in her the possibility of being an attractive woman. Her figure is somewhat inclined to redundancy, but this same fleshiness does away with wrinkles and her face is as smooth and rosy as that of a child. Her hair, which is still plentiful; she wears in flowing curls, because she wore them like that when she first met her husband, some forty odd years ago. This gives her a rather singular appearance, in this day of more conventional coiffure and her dress does not make her look less odd.

For one thing, she indulges in shirt waists, and this is an article of attire that the middle aged woman should deny herself, if she is stout. Her corset was decidedly not of the straight front variety. She also wore a short skirt,—another garment that is never becoming to a large woman. In imitation of the young girls whom she had seen wear four-in-hand ties, this woman had put on a turn down collar and a make up four-in-hand. Apparently she was entirely contented with herself,—but it would have been an exceptionally dutiful son or daughter who would with pride have introduced her to strangers. Yet had her dress been criticised, no matter how kindly, her feelings would have been hurt deeply. And for that reason her family endures the mortification of her eccentric aspect, loving her too dearly to wound her by a word of disparagement, or even of advise.

The mother need not of necessity be obliged to entertain in an elaborate fashion, any more than she must dress in gorgeous attire. But she should make her children's friends welcome to the family table, she should know what are their interests and ambitions, she should pay enough attention to her own dress to be sure that she will appear well in the eyes of her family and of others. She should share the pursuits of her sons and daughters so far as she can. The lectures and concerts and clubs that interest them should claim her interest. She should join in their outdoor occupations. She should fish with them, row with them, walk with them, wheel with them.

All this is not merely to be a companion to the juniors and so to do them good and help them on in life. The association does that, but it does more besides. It keeps the mother young. It brings her in touch with what is going on in the world about her and makes her feel a part of the great scheme of things instead of a self-centered atom off by herself. There is no danger of her getting into a back eddy and staying there if she is with her children. They are bound to go on and she goes with them. She can afford to expend a great deal of compassionate thought on the woman who has suffered herself to become a back number.

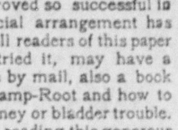
DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.



Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root and the address on every bottle. Binghampton, N. Y.

Would Not Pay Taxes.

Tuesday Tax Collector John Beam, of Snyder township Blair county went to the stone quarry near the Tyrone iron works and made an effort to collect taxes amounting to $3.27 from a foreigner named Mike Shutic in the usual way. Mike refused to pay and forcefully resisted the collector's further effort to gather the ducats. Mr. Beam then came to town and swore out a warrant before 'Squire Taylor, which was put in the hands of Constable Owens for service. The man was brought to town and given a hearing, with the result that he had to pay $6.67 to square his bill with the collector, and costs of the officers for going to the trouble of making him walk the the line. On March 28 last a similar case was handled by the same collector and officers, the delinquent being John Whist, employed at the same place. In John's case a Smart Aleck accompanied him to the 'squire office and was instrumental in getting John to persist in refusing to pay up. John was finally committed, but after landing in the lockup he discovered that this government is not quite his yet to run without assistant, so he paid seven dollars and got out of the clutches of the law. His taxes amounted to only $1.20 John had flourished a club when Collector Beam undertook to do business with him in a civil way.—Tyrone Herald.

THE WEARY WAY.

Daily Becoming Less Wearisome to Many in Bellefonte.

With a back that ached all day
With rest disturbed at night
Annoying urinary disorders
'Tis a weary way indeed
Doan's Kidney Pills drive weariness away
Are endorsed by Bellefonte citizens

G. H. Bradt of 121 Penn street gardener says: "I had a lame back and pain over my kidneys. I was at times so lame it was most painful to straighten up after sitting or stooping and any lifting or turning suddenly hurt me exceedingly. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, some Bellefonte people who had been cured by using them and I procured a box from F. Potts Green's drug store."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. sole agents for the United States.

A Severe Storm.

A severe electric storm passed over this section Wednesday. Wm. Adams' house near Milesburg was struck and Mrs. Adams was unconscious for a time from the effects. While Wm. Fishburn was driving from Bellefonte to his farm, about two miles west of Bellefonte, he took shelter from the storm by driving under the overshot of his father's barn, Henry Fishburn's. A flash of lightning struck the building and killed one of the horses in the team driven by Wm. Fishburn.

Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

"When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was about all gray. But now it is a nice rich black, and as thick as I could wish."—MRS. SUSAN KLOFFENSTIEN, Tuscumbia, Ala.

Unlawful to Gig Fish.

Commissioner of Fisheries W. E. Meehan has made the announcement, in view of a contrary impression which appeared to prevail among some anglers, that it is unlawful to use a gig or spear to catch fish. Such violations of the law, the commissioner says, would subject the guilty person to a fine of $25,

A Shop that Never had a Strike.

The factory which has for its cardinal principles, fair treatment of its men, the payment of an honest day's pay for an honest day's work, and which instills into its employees principles of loyalty and honesty, need have no fear of labor troubles It is the record of the Baldwin Locomotive Works that they have never had a strike, neither do they discriminate in favor or against the union men. The workmen know that the latch string to the head of the establishment is always out, and that any one, of whatsoever station. can secure a respectful hearing of any grievance he may have. It takes years of good faith before the workingmen can understand that principles such as these are traditions of a plant, and if such traditions are to be kept alive they must be instilled in a sufficient number of men to form the back bone of the latter element. It is a difficult matter to teach an old dog new tricks. so that the apprentices offer the most fertile field for the development of a good, loyal body of men.

The Baldwin Locomotive works have always maintained a system of apprenticeship, and the certificate of Mr. Edward Longstreth, who rose from the apprentice's rank to that of a proprietor, is evidence not only of the establishment of the system in the early sixties. but also as to its effectiveness. In January of 1901, however, a new system was inaugurated in which the apprentices are divided into three classes. —S. M. Vauclain, in The Engineering Magazine for June.

COL. PRUNER'S WILL.

Said to Have Provided for an Orphan's Home.

Col. Edward J. Pruner, who died recently worth $200,000 is said to have made several wills, one executed in 1892, another in 1896 and one drawn up just before his death but not signed. It is believed that the one made in 1896 will stand it has not been probated. It is said to provide liberally for Mrs. John Hoffer, his only sister; leaves $25,000 to Mrs. Clara Moyer, of Tyrone, a daughter of a deceased brother; the Shrom girls, neices, receives from three to five thousand dollars and Mrs. Dr. Hayes, neice receives a liberal amount.

The principal part of this will is the wish of Mr. Pruner to establish an orphans' home in Bellefonte. In it he has set aside what is known as the Pruner homestead, on Pine street, Bellefonte, for some years occupied by his sister. Mrs. John Hoffer, to be used for such purposes. To maintain it valuable properties in Bellefonte and Tyrone, unseated lands in this county and some western lands, all aggregating in value about $40,000, are set aside, the income from which it is estimated would be about $2,500 per annum.

This orphanage is established for the benefit of children of Bellefonte and Tyrone between the ages of 5 and 12 years, who are without parents or friends to care for them. The institution will be under the control of authorities of the two boroughs.

The Fidelity Trust Co., of Philadelphia, is named as executor. The will is written in Mr. Pruner's hand, and in some ways is considered very loosely drawn. The unsigned will had no provision whatever in it for the establishing of an orphanage and there was considerable difference in the various bequests named.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Eugene Welch, While Demented, Attempts to End Life.

Eugene Welch, an employee of the American Lime and Stone Company, attempted to commit suicide Thursday about 5 o'clock at his home on Logan street. He had become demented worrying about the possibility of being thrown out of employment, and took this desperate means of relief. He made several very serious wounds in his throat, and, partially severed the windpipe, there are grave doubts of his recovery. When discovered he was taken to Dr. Sebring's office and later to the hospital where he is receiving every attention possible.

He did the deed standing in front of a mirror, the instrument used being a razor. He was discovered by his wife who at once gave the alarm and neighbors rushed in, followed by the police soon after and he was prevented from doing himself further harm.

He was a sober and industrious man about forty years of age. He has a wife and two little girls, the one about 9 months old.

Later—Dr. Sebring, the attending physician states that Mr. Welch is getting along very nicely with a good chance for recovery. The wind-pipe was severed and several arteries cut but he fortunately missed the main arteries.

In a Flourishing Condition.

St Paul's A. M. E., church at this place is prospering greatly under the pastorate of Rev. J. E. Morris and the assistance of its church workers, as the following report of Secretary William Mills to the District Conference at Lewistown will testify. Mr. Mills is secretary of the local board and was delegate to the Conference but was unable to attend. Spiritually and financially it is in good condition.

Financially it is exceedingly gratifying to note in the past three quarters we have made excellent financial progress as the following figures will attest. The following amounts have been raised by the Stewarts from the commencement of this conference year to date and expended.

Raised on pastors salery	$410 65
Presiding Elders assessment	33.00
On other Stewards purposes	27.16
Total amt collected and expended by Stewards	$470.81

It is with profound gratitude to God that we are able to report the above Spiritual and financial progress of the Stewards and that the trustees have been none the less progressive as the following will determine. It is most gratifying to the trustees to be able to acquaint the conference of our new enterprise in purchasing a parsonage, a long cherished idea which we have just recently been able to carry into effect through the energy of our pastor, officers, congregation and the benevolent citizens of our community. We have raised since the beginning of this conference year to date nine months $290.35 and have paid off all outstanding accounts including $100.00 on parsonage with $1.50 interest making in all $101.50. The total amount raised and expended $761.16 by Stewards and trustees. We pray the blessing of the Lord upon the deliberations of the conference and the success of the churches throughout the District. We also solicit the prayers of the conference for success in our enterprise.

Missionary Conference.

The series of meetings of the Christian Missionary society of eastern Pennsylvania held in the Disciple church in Blanchard and which closed Thursday evening was a grand success. It drew together ministers and laymen from various parts of the state and large congregations from Blanchard, Beech Creek and nearby towns. All the sessions were largely attended and proved, not only very profitable, but largely enjoyable. The visiting clergymen, ladies and gentlemen were pleasantly entertained by the citizens, members and friends of the congregation, Rev. M. C. Frick, pastor, of the church, will conduct protracted meetings every evening during this and next week.
